You! Your organization's social platforms are a great way to promote and build interest in advance of the event. Share your excitement in creating a culture of literacy starting with your RIF book celebration and throughout your implementation of Books for Ownership with your community.

You can target parents, community members, local government officials, etc. throughly our organization social media channels.

WHAT

Share your event's date, location, photos and anecdotes from your book celebration by posting on your social media and tagging RIF.

WHEN

Before, during and after your book celebration.

WHERE

Instagram, Twitter, Facebook, and blogs. Use your organization's social platforms and encourage friends and the community to share.

WHY

Celebrate the transformative power of literacy! Share the joy of reading and the dedication of your organization by taking to social media to celebrate this fantastic initiative. Your efforts to raise awareness for children's literacy and encourage reading can support your future fundraising and volunteer needs.

HELPFUL TIPS

Use social media before your event to encourage interest and after to showcase your event and build commitment to your reading program for the future.

Encourage your volunteers, teachers, leaders etc. to participate in the social outreach. The more contributors, the more awareness will be generated for your efforts. An easy way to do this is to encourage community literacy lovers to 'retweet' your organization's tweets or 'share' your Facebook posts.

In terms of using photos:

- Capture images that show joy, expression, and action in the children choosing their books to take home and own.
- Shoot clean pictures from several different angle
- Play with different perspectives - sometimes the photo you think won't turn out ends up being a winner!
