

Dear Parent/Caregiver,

Your child recently participated in a Reading Is Fundamental (RIF) Books for Ownership book celebration event. We hope he or she has shared their new books(s) that they were able to choose to bring home and own. The good news is the reading and learning can continue at home.

RIF offers its free digital book resource site, Literacy Central at rif.org/literacy-central, to provide parents, volunteers, and caregivers with a variety of fun and engaging reading resources tied to the book(s) your child selected. Literacy Central offers free activities, games, reading passages, videos, and more to complement many classic and popular children's books.

A few tips you may find useful in using Literacy Central:

1. Log on at rif.org/literacy-central.
2. Choose the "Parents" path to begin exploring resources.
3. Review the reading activities, featured resources, and monthly activity calendars for activities to do with your child at home.
4. You can search by title for a specific book and, on the search results page, you'll see filters that help you narrow your results by age group, reading level, resource type, themes, and more.

Don't see resources for your child's favorite book? Don't worry – RIF adds new titles every day. We hope you'll start exploring the free literacy resources today!

Happy reading!
