November 1 – National Author's Day

Celebrating the Word Roots scrib/script = Write

Books have a mind of their own. They take time to develop, research, write, edit, revise, and rewrite. Whether we prefer fiction, non-fiction, or a mix of both, writers have been telling stories to fill our heads for thousands of years. Authors mark time through their observations of history. Their tales create remarkable memories of different times, places, and peoples. Their books allow us to visit again and again the worlds that authors' share with us.

After her grandmother's death in 1968, Sue Cole promoted the observance of National Authors Day. She urged people to write a note to their favorite author on November 1, to "brighten up the sometimes lonely business of being a writer." Who is your favorite author?

Match the scrib/script word with the matching illustration. How does each illustration involve writing?

Scribble Inscription Prescription Scribe

Check out these Other Scrib/Script Words:

Transcribe

Superscript

Scripture

Learn more about a Word Roots approach at www.timrasinski.com > Products. Contact us at trasinsk@kent.edu