ABOUT THE BOOK

Forced to work long hours, George was unable to attend school or learn how to read. But he was determined—he listened to the white children's lessons and learned the alphabet. Then he taught himself to read. Soon he began composing poetry in his head and reciting it as he sold fruits and vegetables on a nearby college campus. News of the slave poet traveled quickly among the students, and before long, George had customers for his poems. But George was still enslaved. Would he ever be free?

In this powerful biography of George Moses Horton, the first southern African-American man to be published, Don Tate tells an inspiring and moving story of talent and determination.

THEMES

Poetry | African-American history | Slavery | Freedom

MEETING THE STANDARDS

The activities in this guide directly address a variety of standards across the curriculum. For a complete list of the Common Core English Language Arts Standards addressed, please see pages 16–17.

- Explain what is keeping him from his desire.
- Tell what his determination to teach himself to read says about his character.
- “His verses swayed with emotion, like the music of Sunday services. They kept him strong as he grew up to be a young man.”
 - Explain how words can keep someone strong. Tell why George Moses Horton had to remain strong.
 - The word remarkable means extraordinary and unusual. Discuss why George Moses Horton's ability to compose poetry was an extraordinary skill. Explain why committing his poems to memory was an unusual thing to do.
 - List ways that George Moses Horton's childhood was a remarkable one.
- “Every eye grew wide and every mouth fell open at the sound of George's voice, uttering beautiful verses. The students were awestruck when they found out that he had composed them himself.”
 - Tell why the college students were awestruck by George Moses Horton's poetry.
 - Consider how being separated from his family served as inspiration for his poetry.
 - Examine how being enslaved would give George Moses Horton ideas for his poetry.
- “His poems protested his enslavement. No other American slave had done that before.”
 - Explain why George Moses Horton protested his enslavement.
 - Explain why no other American slave had protested enslavement with published poetry.
 - George Moses Horton's published poetry made him feel very proud. Did everyone feel the same way about his works? Explain your answer.
- “George was devastated.”
 - Explain why George Moses Horton's master refused to sell him.
 - The word devastated means hopeless or destroyed. Explain why George Moses Horton felt hopeless. Tell what has caused him to feel this way.
 - Observe the illustration in which George Moses Horton is laying his head on his hands. Though he is devastated, identify what his mind continues to focus on. Tell why this is important.
- “New laws were passed in North Carolina. People who printed and distributed anti-slavery materials were penalized. Worse yet, it became illegal to teach a slave how to read or write.”
 - Discuss the affect the abolitionist's books, posters, and pamphlets had on the slaves.
 - Tell why people were not allowed to print and distribute anti-slavery materials.
 - Explain why teaching a slave how to read or write became unlawful.
- “George's love of words had taken him on a great journey. Words made him strong. Words allowed him to dream. Words loosened the chains of bondage long before his last day as a slave.”
 - Review George Moses Horton's biography. List ways that words made his story remarkable.
 - Discuss how dreams helped George Moses Horton to endure devastation and heartaches.
 - Tell how words helped to keep George Moses Horton's mind free, even though his body was enslaved.

AUTHOR SPOTLIGHT

DON TATE

Q: You came into the publishing world as an illustrator. Do you feel that you have grown to love words in the same way that George Moses Horton did?

A: I love words, too. But for me, words were an acquired taste. As a child, I didn't enjoy reading much. I preferred drawing. I finally became an avid reader in my early twenties upon discovering authors like Richard Wright and Gordon Parks. Before writing my first book, I often felt embarrassed about my own imperfect use of words. I didn't (and still don't) speak The King's English. I often used words like "ain't" and "got." Writing that first book, getting it published, and winning awards gave me the confidence to write Poet: The Remarkable Story of George Moses Horton. I am a lover of words today.

Q: Did the process of writing and illustrating this book affect your life in any way? How so?

A: I grew as a storyteller. Typically I illustrate stories written by other authors. With Poet, I wrote and illustrated Horton's story. I began by writing and revising the manuscript many times. Then I began to sketch, which affected the words. Revised the words, which affected the sketches—it was like a moving target.

Q: What do you hope young readers will learn from George Moses Horton's story?

A: It was not my intention for the story to emphasize any particular message. But the more I studied George's life, the more I realized there is a message in there that can't be ignored. The last page reads: "Words made [George] strong.

Words allowed him to dream. Words loosened the chains of bondage long before his last day as a slave." What's to be learned? Read! Education, I believe, is the answer to many of our society's ailments. And education begins with reading.

Q: What did you learn from George Moses Horton's story?

A: Horton's story reinforced some things that I already knew, that I learned from studying many stories of enslaved people: In the face of our greatest adversities, people can still do great things using their innate God-given gifts. Regardless of the circumstances, work hard, be persistent, believe in yourself, and never give up.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

- Don Tate said that, as a child, he didn't enjoy reading. And, yet, as an adult, he became an author. Do you find this fact surprising in any way? Can you relate to his words?
- Explain what Don Tate meant by stating that illustrations affect words and that words affect illustrations.
- Describe the experience of reading and studying George Moses Horton's biography. Did his story leave an impression on you? Did you become inspired in any way? How so?

ALPHABETIZING

“George was determined to learn how to read. When white children studied their books, he lingered nearby. He listened as they repeated the letters of the alphabet. Soon, George could recite the alphabet himself.”

OBJECTIVE: To practice the skills of letter recognition, beginning word analysis, and letter matching in a concrete, manipulative manner.

MATERIALS:

- Poet: The Remarkable Story of George Moses Horton
- Computer paper or cardstock
- Scissors
- Glue sticks or tape
- Alphabetizing Matrix and Word Labels (Guide, pages 7–8)
- Alphabetizing Matrix Answer Key (Guide, page 9)
- Dictionary

PROCEDURE A:

- Print Alphabetizing Matrix and Word Labels on either computer paper or cardstock.
- Cut out the labels.
- Using the Alphabetizing Matrix, match the first letter of the word printed on the labels with the correct letter of the alphabet.
- Continue until all word labels have been matched on the Alphabetizing Matrix.
- Tape or glue the words in correct space on the Alphabetizing Matrix.
- Check your work using the Alphabetizing Matrix Answer Key (Guide, page 9)

PROCEDURE B:

- Prepare Alphabetizing Matrix and Word Labels as directed in Procedure A.
- Choose a word label. Use a dictionary to help define the word.
- Search through Poet: The Remarkable Story of George Moses Horton as a reference to locate the word in the text.
- Once the word has been located in the text, place the word label in the correct alphabetical space on the Alphabetizing Matrix.
- Continue until all word labels have been located in the text and matched on the Alphabetizing Matrix.

NOTE: Words for the letters X and Z are unavailable in the text. A “FREE SPACE” serves as a marker on the Alphabetizing Matrix for these omitted letters.

TIMELINE OF GEORGE MOSES HORTON'S LIFE

OBJECTIVE: To present and interpret key details of text in a visual manner.

MATERIALS:

- Poet: The Remarkable Story of George Moses Horton
- Timeline Strips #1 and #2 (Guide, pages 11–12)
- Timeline Tabs #1 and #2 (Guide, pages 13–14)
- Blank Timeline Tabs (Guide, page 14)
- Tape
- Scissors
- Fine-tipped markers or colored pencils
- Writing paper

PROCEDURE:

- Using scissors, trim around the borders of the Timeline Strips and Timeline Tabs.
- Using tape, construct the Timeline by securing strips together. Take care to secure the lower tab of strip #1 (1775–1795) behind the number 1800 on strip #2 (1800–1820) and the lower tab of strip #2 behind the 1825 on strip #3. Repeat process with the strips found on page 14.
- Lay Timeline on flat surface.
- Match the dates printed on the Timeline Tabs close to the associated date along the Timeline and secure with tape.

INTERPRETATION PROJECT IDEAS:

- Using Poet: The Remarkable Story of George Moses Horton as a reference, search through the book to find illustrations and text correlating with the information printed on the Timeline Tabs.
- Print blank Timeline Tabs. Use fine-tipped markers or colored pencils to illustrate the information printed on correlating printed Timeline Tabs. Arrange both sets of Tabs opposite one another along the Timeline.
- Review the information printed on the Timeline Tabs. Choose one that you consider to be the most remarkable one of all. Write a short informative essay stating the reasons why you feel this way. Illustrate your work.
